Common Focus Writing Preparation Sheet

Prepared by: Latifur's Focus Writing

To write a better focus writing follow these steps:

1. Define your topic: Start by defining the topic you want to write about. Be specific and clear about what you want to discuss. This will help you stay focused and avoid straying off topic.
2. Identify your main idea: Once you have defined your topic, identify the main idea you want to convey. This will be the central point of your piece and will help you stay on track.
3. Plan your structure: Plan the structure [steps] of your writing. Decide on the main points you want to make and the order in which you will present them. A clear structure will help you stay focused and make your writing more effective.
4. Keep your reader in mind: Consider your reader as you write. Think about what they already know and what they might be interested in learning from your writing. This will help you stay on topic and avoid unnecessary details.
5. Use clear and concise language: Use clear and concise language to convey your ideas. Avoid jargon and technical language that might confuse your reader. This will help you stay focused and make your writing more accessible.
6. Edit and revise: Once you have written your piece, edit and revise it. Look for ways to improve your focus and eliminate any unnecessary details. Make sure your writing is clear and easy to read.

By following these steps, you can write a better focus writing.

By UNFCCC:

"Climate change is the single greatest threat to a sustainable future but, at the same time, addressing the climate challenge presents a golden opportunity to promote prosperity, security and a brighter future for all." - Ban Ki-moon, former UN Secretary-General.

"The climate is changing, but it's not too late to take action. We can still make a difference, but we need to act now." - Mary Robinson, former UN High Commissioner for Human Rights.

"Climate change is a global problem that requires a global solution. We must work together to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, adapt to the impacts of climate change, and build a sustainable future for all." - Patricia Espinosa, Executive Secretary of UNFCCC.

By UNEP-

"The health of ecosystems on which we and all other species depend is deteriorating more rapidly than ever. We need a fundamental shift in our approach to managing natural resources." - UNEP's Global Environment Outlook Report.

"We need a new economic model that values nature as much as we value financial capital. It's time to put a price on pollution and invest in a green economy." - Inger Andersen, former UNEP Executive Director.

"Climate change is not just an environmental issue, it's a social justice issue. The poorest and most vulnerable people are already suffering the most from its impacts." - Joyce Msuya, former UNEP Executive Director.

By IPCC:

"Limiting climate change would require substantial and sustained reductions in greenhouse gas emissions which, together with adaptation, can limit climate change risks." - IPCC Special Report on Global Warming of 1.5°C.

"The impacts of climate change are already being felt in many parts of the world, and they will become more severe and widespread in the coming decades. We must act now to reduce emissions and build resilience to climate change." - IPCC Fifth Assessment Report.

"The science is clear: limiting global warming to 1.5°C requires rapid and far-reaching transitions in energy, land, urban, and infrastructure, and industrial systems." - IPCC Special Report on Global Warming of 1.5°C.

Write an Introduction...this could be-

Environmental disasters are catastrophic events that occur when the natural environment is severely disrupted, leading to significant harm to human health, property, and the environment. The world is currently facing a critical environmental challenge in the form of climate change, which is primarily driven by the release of greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide, methane, and nitrous oxide, into the atmosphere that trap heat from the sun and prevent it from escaping back into space, causing global temperatures to rise. This rise in temperature has led to a range of environmental disasters, including more frequent and severe natural disasters, rising sea levels, and the melting of polar ice caps. The consequences of these disasters are widespread and far-reaching, affecting not only the environment but also human health, the economy, and social stability. To address this problem, it is essential that we take collective action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, shift towards renewable energy sources, and promote sustainable practices.

Step 6:

Conclusion; This could be.....

In conclusion, the environmental challenges we face today, including climate change and its associated disasters, pose a significant threat to the health and well-being of our planet and its inhabitants. The continued release of greenhouse gases into the atmosphere, largely driven by human activities, has already caused irreversible damage to our environment, and threatens to cause even more severe disruptions in the future. However, there is still hope for the future. With collective effort and determination, we can take action to mitigate the impact of these disasters, reduce our carbon footprint, and promote sustainable practices. This requires a global commitment to cooperation, innovation, and investment in research and development of clean energy technologies. By working together, we can build a more sustainable future for ourselves, our communities, and future generations to come.
